WILL STAKE EAST COAST CHANNEL TO HILLSBORO

Light House Superintendent Writes That This Work Will Be Started This Season

Assurance has been received that the United States lighthouse department would soon mark with permanent markers the Florida East Coast inland waterway from Miami to the Hillsboro inlet, said to be the most difficult part of the Miami-Jacksouville waterway in which to keep to the channel.

In a letter to the Miami chamber of commerce William W. Demeritt, superintendent of lighthouses of the seventh naval district, writes that later in the season his department intends to put in a first-class system of markers for the channel.

The lighthouse superintendent expects to start within a short time on the marking of the Cape Florida channel, and asks the chamber of commerce to arrange with the city for permission to store a quantity of creosoted piling on the municipal dock.
