Diagnosis: 668-887.0 Adenocarcinoma of the rectum with metastases to the liver. Incident to Service. Not misconduct Admitted inpatient 8/10/50 This 51 year old Coast Guard's man was admitted to Tumor Clinic on 8/10/50 as a transfer from the Dispensary in New London, Conn. His chief complaint was pain in the right upper quadrant of about 11 weeks duration. This has been associated with some nausea and vomitin and he had also noticed traces of blood in his bowel movements which were ~~xxxxx~~ ordinarily dark brown in color.
Proctoscopy had been performed at New London and he was told that he had a mass in his rectum.
Physical examination on admission was generally negative except for the abdominal and rectum examination. It is said that the liver could be felt 4 cm. below the costal margin and that on rectal examination there was a large intraluminal mass at the end of the examining finger. Routine laboratory work and chest plates were normal and on 8/14/50 biopsies were taken from the mass in the rectum. The microscopic report was adenocarcinoma of the rectum.

Exploratory laparotomy was undertaken on 8/22/50, but on opening the abdomen it was seen that the liver was markedly enlarged with many hard carcinomatus nodules. There was also extension of the carcinoma laterally beyond the rectum in the pelvis. The descending colon was brought to the skin surface and colostomy was performed. His post-operative course was uneventful and from 9/18/50 to 10/17/50 the patient was treated with high voltage roentgen theraphy through two anterior and two posterior ports measurin g 15 x 10 cm. each. He was given a total dosage of 2000 r. in air to each port in daily dosage of 200r to each of two ports. The physical factors were 250 KVP, 30 ma., 70 cm. However on rectal examination there was no demonstrable diminution in the size of the tumor mass at the completion of treatment.
